on page 3 of "DWP discovery 04-19-1979", DWP wrote:
"... HLRP mentioned that Laura Ingalls Loomis was the one who would go around to people's houses in the winter and cut rags and cloth for quilts. I have heard HLRP say that she remembers Laura Ingalls Loomis in the dining-room (the old dining room; the present TV room) at The Homestead cutting up rags and cloth and making quilts. Just now HLRP mentioned that Laura G. Loomis used to sit at the sewing machine in front of the window (where the marble topped table now is) in the former dining room. While HLRP and I were looking at the books I happened to notice that each of the volumes is embossed "L G Loomis" on the base of the spine.